About XOOPS license policy

I think you should notice that XOOPS China team started their own commercial entity recently. One of my friends contacted XOOPS China for his own project, and he had some concerns about License. Some guy in XOOPS China claimed that they had dominant contribution to some modules of XOOPS, and he said XOOPS China had the rights to redistribute those modules under license other than GPL/LGPL (he used the example of MySQL). I'm quite astonished to this statement, and therefor I have to ask you for confirmation. I'm an active GNU hobbyist, and I think everything should remain GPL as long as there is contribution of the community.

Thanks, anyway.

BTW: I asked wtravel first, and he suggested to ask you. He believed that only those modules not solely dependant on XOOPS could have an alternative license.
